MISCELLANEOUS READING. HOW TO CURE CORNS.

Few people in this age of tight boots and diminutive shoes are free from the annoyance of corns, and many are seriously and painfully afflicted with these ungainly and unwelcome pedal excrescences. The prevalence and severity of these enemies to person al comfort have excited the ingenuity and cupidity of a large class of persons who, from time to time, traverse the country professing to possess the information and means neces sary to produce a radical cure of corns, bunions, etc., with remarkably celerity, and without causing the least pain. For so philanthropic and excellent a service, the chiropodist, anglice corn doctor, expects a handsome fee and, perhaps, deserves it. It is quite true, however, that gross impositions are frequently practiced upon people in this regard, and a great deal of money is expended, not only without benefit, but to the actual detriment of the sufferer. In this view of the 1 EDDY & CO., Managers of the SPARTA triment of the sufferer. In this view of the ACADEMY LOTTERY, in each of their Single matter, we believe we shall do our readers a Number Lotteries for January, 1859, at Augusta. service by copying from that excellent and well GEO., in public, under the superintendence of Cominformed publication Hall's Journal of Health, informed publication Hall's Journal of Health, a simple, cheap and efficacious remedy for corns all sorts. The Journal of Health tells us that the simplest, safest, most available, and consequently the best cure for corns on the toes, consists in three operations: 1. Soak the feet hot in water for fifteen minutes, night and morning, for a week. 2. After the soaking, rub a little sweet oil on the corn, any other mild form of grease, with the fingers, for about five minutes.

3. Cut a hole, in one, two or three thicknesses of soft buckskin and bind it on the toe; so that the hole in the buckskin shall receive The object of the water and oil is to soften the corn and parts adjoining; the object of the buckskin is to protect the corn from pressure. In a very short time the corn will become painless, and will subsequently fall out itself, as it is a growth, and is pushed upward and outward by the more natural growth beneath. It is thrown out of the body by the action of the parts, as a splinter or a crushed bone, as being no longer a part of the body. If anything else is done to the corn, it should be simply picked out with the finger nail, as cutting makes it take a deeper root, and dangerous bleedings sometimes occur.-Our object was to recommend something which we knew to be safe, practicable and efficient. We stated further that the original causes of them, to wit, pressure with a tight shoe, or friction with a loose one, would cause them to return, and even more readily than at first, because the structure of the skin about a corn is mal-formed for life, and would no more become entirely natural than a finger would grow again if cut off. So, when a person has had the consumption and gets well, he cannot be said to be perfectly cured, because it will always remain with deficiency replaced, yet by making the remainder of the lungs work more fully, he may have even better health than he ever had before. Thus, it is literally and strictly true that corns and consumption are never cured-because their very existence depends on destruction of the organization and substance of a part of the body to be replaced. There are corn doctors and corn salves, for no longer time than the plan we have de vised; while ours has the preference, as costing nothing, and being wholly without danger. Remedies are valuable for the multitude in proportion as they are safe, cheap and attain-If corns are pared down, from that time their base becomes more deeply rooted, and in old age blacken, gangrene, and ultimate death! Therefore we advise the prompt treatment of corns as above. It may be months before they return, but when they do, the same treatment will always be effectual and always safe. TITHE BRITISH REVIEWS AND BLACK.
